1 Day Doi Chiang Dao foothill

Beyond Imagination

Doi Chiang Dao National Park, Chiang Mai province, is Thailand's third highest mountain at 2,220 meters and, viewed from Chiang Dao village, is one of the most spectacular sights in the whole country. This limestone massif has a number of peaks and ridges over 2,000 meters in a horseshoe shape and has a series of forest types that change with altitude. The variety of forest types and altitude of the mountain combined with its close proximity to Myanmar result in a large number of exciting birds found here as well as some excellent views and a relaxing atmosphere.

Wat Tham Pha Pong 332 speie on eBird: The easily accessed car park and steps to the temple are a great place to get to grips with all of the more common birds to be found here. There are some fruiting trees at the furthest point into the temple where lots of Drongos, Orioles, Bluebirds and Green Pigeons feed. The limestone around the monk's quarters are often a good place to see Streaked Wren Babbler and Speckled Piculet can often be located from its noisy drumming. Spending time in the temple grounds is a good way to see a high number of bird species in a short space of time.

Facilities On this trail have a lot of Thai & European restaurants, toilet and grocery store.

Telephone signal 3G, 4G, 5G network of AIS, True is good service.

Best Period : Dec. - Feb. winter season

Poor Season : July. - Oct. rainy season
